Historical Information

Bud was a farmer, rancher, gardener, building contractor, and for many years, a Caney Valley school board member. He graduated from Ramona High School. He farmed and raised cattle on the land where he grew up as a boy, in Ramona. He attended Oklahoma State University (OSU), majoring in agricultural economics after serving in the military during World War II. The Horsman family farm thrived as Bud used his agriculture education to ensure successful crops and healthy animals. Bud lived a long and fruitful life and died at the age of 85.

Brad was much like his father and enjoyed the outdoors. He was a member of the Vo-Ag class at Caney Valley High School in Ramona and as a member of the Future Farmers of America, was selected to receive the State Farmer's Degree when he was a senior. He showed cattle, horses, and pigs while in high school. He also was a member of the 4-H Washington County Saddle Club. Brad trained several champion hunting dogs. Unfortunately, Brad's life was cut short when he fell asleep at the wheel of his vehicle and was involved in a single-car fatality when he was 23 in 1978.
