

Historic Lincoln Elementary School - Built in 1914

Bartlesville Lincoln Elementary School Scholarship Fund, Inc.

Lincoln Elementary School, built in 1914, is one of the oldest school buildings in Bartlesville, Oklahoma and serves as headquarters for Service & Technology Corporation (STC), a consulting engineering firm today. The school was purchased by K. Vasudevan, chairman and founder of STC, in 1986 and converted to office space.

To honor the students and staff who had called the school home, Mr. Vasudevan created the BLESS Fund — Bartlesville Lincoln Elementary School Scholarship — to help students who otherwise might not be able to attend college, especially in engineering and the sciences. It is an interest-free loan scholarship intended for average students from middle-income families, though others are not excluded from consideration.

The scholarship has awarded more than 105 scholarships helping young people seek careers in engineering, technology, science, business, education, medicine and fine arts. Students have attended various universities and admirably have a 100 percent payback record on their loans.

The four year duration and the $10,000.00 cumulative total loan can be extended by the scholarship committee for graduate studies or under other special circumstances.
